Farm to Fork: Restore The Roar: Manufacturing Renaissance Rod Kackley

Farm to Fork is really a misnomer, in a way. After all, everything that happens on a farm is meant to put food on a fork or drink in a glass. It's the 'who, what, why, when, and how,' that is the real story.

America's farmers and food processors are America's entrepreneurs. With this short stories of business struggle and success, we learn what it takes to grow a small business down on the farm.

This first edition of Farm to Fork concentrates on agricultural and food processing companies in West Michigan, from an artisan who makes ice cream and his struggles, to a turkey producer that took the place of a french fry manufacturing operation in an urban environment, and now sells 'everything but the gobble.'

Farm to Fork, the fourth book in the Restore The Roar: Manufacturing Renaissance series looks at entrepreneurship in agriculture, the impact of sustainable agriculture, and farming's place in a community's economic development from a West Michigan point of view.
